Task Force 4: Nbs Communicators

ADD ARTICLE ▾

This Task Force synergises and enhances communication approaches and messages across NBS projects.

NBS Communicators synergises communication efforts of Horizon-funded nature-based solutions projects and select missions. We establish connections with international actors and the European Union to communicate and disseminate the latest developments in the nature-based solutions field. This Task Force work centres around building avenues for collaboration in the form of joint messaging, events and communications campaigns to ensure visibility. The Task Force also builds capacity of communicators through knowledge sharing and training.

We meet online up to six times a year. To join our full task force meetings and our walk in meetings, reach out to kassia.rudd@ciel.org.

Definitions

Content types

- Resources - Outputs from projects that can help stakeholders, policy makers, businesses, other researchers, etc, learn something. This could be a video, paper, report infographic, etc.
- Case study - A case study is an example of an action enhancing nature to tackle real world challenges. It gives insights into the benefits for a community or region, helping businesses, policy makers and communities understand why action for nature is essential.
- Article - An article announcing an update in your project or blog post of your choice. Within articles you can choose whether you're writing a blog, news, or opinion piece.
- Event - A listing of an in person, hybrid, or online event relating to your project.

Roles

- Group Manager - 1-3 people in each group that are the “leaders” of the project and have permission to create, review, and publish content. There can be group managers for task forces, hubs, and projects, as well as NetworkNature as a whole.
- Group Member - A member of the group that can create content and view posts, but is not able to publish anything publicly without approval from the Group Manager. A group member can only edit content they have created.
